Main Feature

This prestigious 14.4 hectare poised on an elevated plateau that meets with limestone cliffs sweeping down to the ocean.

Accommodation – 65 villas

Each individual villa is specifically designed and constructed to follow an environmentally sustainable framework, with its own pool and private cabana overlooking the Indian Ocean. The 65 villas showcase contemporary interiors enhanced with touches of nature and traditional Balinese accents – reflected in planes of wood, water, stone and rattan. Walkways and bridges connect the relaxation pavilions and pools to the spacious living areas. The open-plan design, unique flat lava rocks roof and bamboo ceiling allow the gentle sea breeze to circulate throughout all rooms of the villas.

Resort's walls are made from batu palimanan from Jogjakarta, Indonesia. Bamboo ceilings and rattan interior are locally sourced and crafted in Bali. Wood materials are recycled from railway sleepers and telephone poles.

Our responsibilities

Alila Villas Uluwatu follows a dedicated environmental and social sustainability policy that cultivates eco-friendly concepts through environmentally sustainable design principles.

Water conservation : Installation of the soak away rainwater tanks, recyclable grey water system that directs used water through reverse osmosis tanks to be re-used throughout the property. Indigenous plants mostly used in the surrounding landscape require minimum irrigation, thus reducing water wastage.

Energy consumption is kept to a minimum : Using recycled materials such as wood from railway sleepers and telephone poles and unique design of each villa with use of the lava rocks roof, bamboo ceiling and windows placement which encourage air-flow and minimize the use of lights and air-conditioning.

Locally sourced all building materials : Local bamboo used for the ceilings, lime stones from the site, which is hand cut for the garden walls. Locally sourced lava rocks used for the roofs of each villa.

Natural environment : Local plants from the Uluwatu Bali savannah ecosystem on the Bukit are raised in a nursery on site to encourage local bird and animal life.

Integrated architectural design : Alila Villas Uluwatu's landscaping and architectural forms were derived from the local Bali savannah-like environment without intruding on the wild and seasonal surroundings. Using the idea of Bali's rocky terrace fields and lush gully, the architects have created architecture of terraced planes, which protect cool gardens.
